FOREWORD

Starting Early has been developed by the National Center for Education in Maternal and Child Health (NCEMCH) to simplify the search for Federal resources in maternal and child health. There is a wealth of information available from U.S. Government agencies and Federally-operated or funded information centers, but making the connection between the person who needs information and the most appropriate source is not always easy. This guide is designed to aid health professionals, educators, and the general public in identifying these Federal resources.

In this Second Edition, Starting Early has been expanded and reorganized. Efforts were made to contact all Federal agencies and programs relevant to maternal and child health. The identified resources, whether services or materials, have been grouped according to the broad subject categories in the NCEMCH Thesaurus, which is used to classify resources in the NCEMCH Resource Center.

The three parts of Starting Early provide access to three distinct types of Federal information resources. Part I is a listing of Federal agencies and information centers that provide information services related to maternal and child health. An extensive bibliography of publications and audiovisual materials available from Federal or Federally-funded sources is included in Part II, along with ordering information. Part III contains the names, addresses and telephone numbers of Regional MCH Consultants, State MCH and CCS Directors, and the headquarters of the Regional Genetics Services Networks. Subject and title indexes follow.

Every effort has been made to present a comprehensive guide to Federal information resources in the many broad fields that relate to maternal and child health. The agencies that provide the services or publications listed are the best sources of further information on changes in availability. Starting Early will be updated and revised for future editions; comments and suggestions are encouraged, and may be directed to:

PART I

FEDERAL AGENCIES AND INFORMATION CENTERS

INTRODUCTION

Part I of Starting Early is an annotated list of Federal agencies and information centers that are potential sources of assistance in areas related to maternal and child health. In the process of conducting basic and applied research, developing programs, and delivering services, the Federal Government accumulates information that is potentially useful to professionals, parents, and others. While the Bureau of Maternal and Child Health and Resources Development, the National Center for Education in Maternal and Child Health, and the National Maternal and Child Health Clearinghouse serve as the primary sources of information and materials in this area, there are many organizations working in closely allied fields that have useful publications and respond to inquiries from persons interested in MCH-related topics.

Many of the organizations listed here are producers of publications and audiovisual materials found in Part II of Starting Early. Most provide additional information services, which are described briefly. Services may include: responses to inquiries from the general public or specific interest groups; publications and publication catalogs; literature searches; and referral to further resources. The most extensive information services can be expected from those organizations identified as clearinghouses or information centers. The term clearinghouse usually indicates an organization that distributes publications or packaged information, while information centers often provide more individualized service. In the case of Federal agencies, we have listed offices responsible for public inquiries wherever possible.

In addition to the agencies listed in Part I, there are a number of Federal Information Centers in metropolitan areas throughout the United States that provide general information on Federal government agencies and services. Some of these centers have toll-free telephone numbers serving state-wide areas, For a list of the Federal Information Centers and their telephone numbers, write:

PART II (A)

PUBLICATIONS AND AUDIOVISUAL MATERIALS

INTRODUCTION

Section A of Part II is a bibliography listing books, booklets, pamphlets, article reprints, brochures, posters, films, videotapes, and other media on subjects related to maternal and child health. These listings are grouped according to the broad subject categories in the NCEMCH Thesaurus. Most of the categories are also divided into more specific subcategories, as shown in the table of contents. Further subject access by key words is provided through the subject index at the end of Starting Early. (An index of titles contained in Part II is also included.)

Each entry follows this format:

TITLE (foreign languages indicated in parentheses)
LENGTH; DATE; A-V FORMAT (if applicable)
PUBLICATION NUMBER (if available)
PRICE (many are free)
PRODUCER (who developed the contents of the material)
SOURCE (where the material can be ordered)
ABSTRACT (a brief description of the material)

An asterisk to the left of a title indicates that the publication is designed for the use of consumers or nonprofessionals. (Example: *PRENATAL CARE). This will assist parents, health care providers, and health educators in identifying appropriate patient education materials. Publications not marked with an asterisk are primarily designed for the use of practitioners, administrators, educators, or researchers.

Most agencies provide free single copies of publications; bulk copies are often also available, either free or at cost. Still other publications, as well as all audiovisual materials, are sold individually. Please contact the sources listed in Part II, Section B (Ordering Information) for information on obtaining materials listed in Starting Early.

There is no guarantee that all items listed here will continue to be available; funding for individual programs may change, or publications may be withdrawn as they become outdated. Conversely, new publications are continually being introduced by the agencies listed in Part I. By requesting publication catalogs from those agencies that interest you, you will be able to keep up with the availability of their resources.

A further source for Federal publications is the Government Printing Office (GPO), which fills orders from its Washington, D.C. headquarters and operates 26 bookstores around the country. To inquire about catalogs of government publications, or to locate the GPO bookstore nearest you, contact:

U.S. Government Printing Office
710 North Capitol Street
Washington, DC 20402
(202) 275-2091 (central bookstore)
(202) 783-3238 (order desk)

Requests received by NCEMCH reflect a general increase in the demand for MCH-related audiovisual materials, and for publications in foreign languages. This edition of Starting Early contains some foreign language and audiovisual items; however, these entries do not represent an exhaustive listing of such materials. An additional source of information about audiovisuals produced by the U.S. Government is:

National Audiovisual Center
8700 Edgeworth Drive
Capitol Heights, MD 20743
(301) 763-1896

For further information about foreign language health education materials, contact:

ODPHP Health Information Center (OHIC)

REGIONAL MCH ADMINISTRATORS, STATE MCH/CCS DIRECTORS, AND REGIONAL GENETICS SERVICES NETWORKS

INTRODUCTION

Standard Federal administrative regions were established to achieve systematic coordination among agencies and Federal-State-local governments, and to facilitate improvements in management and interagency cooperation. Consultants in the areas of Nursing, Nutrition, Social Work, and Maternal and Child Health Programs work with the ten Public Health Service Regional Offices to serve State MCH agencies and service providers. Some regions do not have consultants in all of these categories.

Following the lists of consultants in each region, we have listed the Directors of Maternal and Child Health Services and Services for Children with Special Health Care Needs (formerly known as CCS) for each State within that region. Some States combine these functions in one office, or maintain a combined office in addition to separate offices for each program. These agencies administer Title V Block Grant MCH programs, and in some cases provide other public health services.

Finally, we have provided a list of Regional Genetics Networks. These groups of genetics services providers, supported by the Bureau of Maternal and Child Health and Resources Development, work to encourage the sharing of resources and information, public and professional education, and data collection. (The groups of States included in the Regional Genetics Networks do not conform to the ten standard Federal administrative regions.)
